

MONTHLY CAPITAL MARKETS REVIEW

News from Asset Management Services Institutional Research

NOVEMBER HIGHLIGHTS

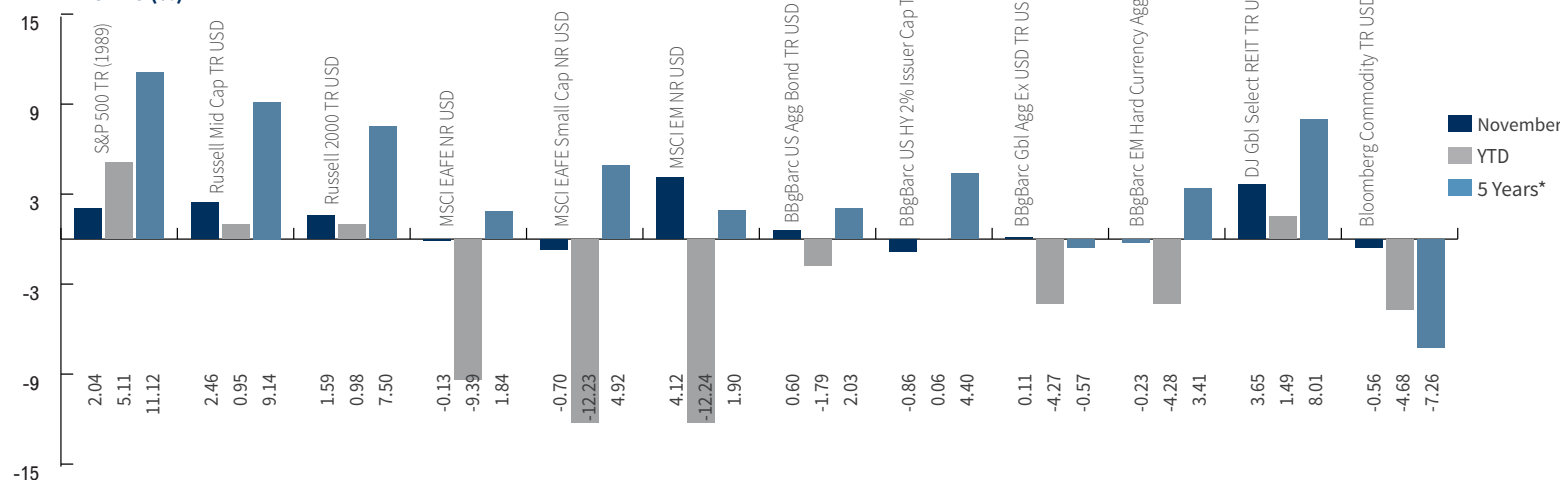

- The U.S. equity markets finished in positive territory for the month of November, possibly fueled by Federal Reserve Chairperson Jerome Powell's tempered language on current interest rate levels. Mr. Powell described interest rates as "just below" neutral, which was a change in tone from remarks made nearly two months ago. Investors liked this change in tone, which set off a rally in the U.S. Large Cap equity market; the S&P 500 gained 2.3% that day. For the month of November, U.S. Mid Cap equities, as measured by the Russell Mid Cap index, led the way domestically with returns of 2.46%. Not far behind, U.S. Large Caps (S&P 500 Index) returned 2.04% and U.S. Small Caps (Russell 2000 Index) returned 1.59%.

- International equity markets were a mixed bag. The emerging markets, measured by the MSCI EM Index, led the way with a return of 4.12% for the month. International large cap equities, as measured by the MSCI EAFE index, and international small cap equities, captured by the MSCI EAFE Small Cap index, posted returns of -0.13% and -0.70%, respectively. Perhaps U.S. dollar strength and fears over trade were the cause for the under performance relative to domestic markets.

- The U.S. core bond market, as measured by the Bloomberg Barclays Aggregate Index, returned 0.60% for the month. Municipal bonds (Bloomberg Barclays Muni Index) led all tracked bond markets with a return of 1.11%. The Bloomberg Barclays U.S. High Yield 2% Issuer Cap Index, which represents the U.S. high yield (junk bond) universe, did not fare as well, as it returned -0.86% in November.

- Crude oil accelerated its negative trajectory from last month by shedding 22.02% in November alone to finish at $50.93 a barrel. The selloff continued on concerns of oversupply, and came ahead of an OPEC partners meeting scheduled for December 6 where they will deliberate a cut in production for 2019. The U.S. 10-year Treasury yield fell to 2.99%, a 15 bp drop in yield from the previous month end.

Fixed income securities are subject to interest rate risk. Generally, when interest rates rise, bond prices fall, and vice versa. Specific sector investing can be subject to different and greater risks than more diversified investments. Investing in small-cap and mid-cap stocks generally involves greater risks, and, therefore, may not be appropriate for every investor. International investing also involves special risks, including currency fluctuations, different financial accounting standards, and possible political and economic volatility. High-yield (below investment-grade) bonds are not suitable for all investors. When appropriate, these bonds should only comprise a modest portion of your portfolio. Commodities trading is generally considered speculative because of the significant potential for investment loss. Specific sector investing such as real estate can be subject to different and greater risks than more diversified investments. Declines in the value of real estate, economic conditions, property taxes, tax laws and interest rates all present potential risks to real estate investments.
